Housing is an essential part of our growing community. Swan River First Nation acknowledges that we need to continuously innovate and improve housing to effectively plan for and meet the changing needs of members.

Leadership also recognizes that it's important members are given a voice and are included in the planning process, leading to more inclusive and respectful Nation-building.

In support of this, the Nation applied for and received a housing grant through Indigenous Services Canada to review and update existing housing policies and management tools. We'll be asking members to share their perspectives on housing needs and how housing should be administered in the community.

An online engagement platform (srfn.ca) will be used to collect housing feedback from members. A dedicated webpage has been set up where members can learn, engage and provide honest input. Important information will be shared on the webpage about each housing topic, along with questions for members to answer.

Starting in September 2021, a different topic will be presented for discussion each week. Topics for discussion include housing need, application and selection process, housing quality, renovation request process, planning for new housing, and cost of housing (the original topic is still posted for input).

Your email invitation will include the link to the webpage where you will have access to the sign-up instructions. Note only registered Band members will be able to access this webpage using the email address that was provided.

Be sure to sign up as soon as you can as housing topics will change regularly and the time to provide input will be limited! Results of member feedback on each topic will be summarized and shared back.
